Please describe the objectives of a veterinarian meeting this shortage situation as well as being located in the community, area, state/insular area, or position requested above (limit your response to 200 words or less).

A licensed livestock auction market is located in Campbell County, South Dakota at which state law requires a veterinarian to inspect all livestock presented for sale. The Auction Market Veterinarian acts as an agent of the South Dakota Animal Industry Board providing health inspections of all livestock presented for sale and change of ownership. Some of the duties performed as an agent of the Board include enforcing state animal health regulations, recording animal identification upon change of ownership, and validating animal health for interstate shipment. Auction Market Veterinarians are familiar with States' animal health import requirements, are federally accredited, and provide Certificates of Veterinary Inspection for interstate movement of livestock. This position will require designating at least one and possibly more days per week to be present at the market facility. This market is located in a community that meets the definition of "rural communities." Outside of performing duties at the auction market this veterinarian will practice food animal medicine servicing the local area of Campbell, Walworth, and McPherson Counties. Collectively between time spent at the auction market and private practice the successful candidate will commit at least 80% of his or her time practicing food animal medicine.

Please describe the activities of a veterinarian meeting this shortage situation and being located in the community, area, state/insular area, or position requested above (limit your response to 200 words or less).

The Auction Market Veterinarian shall inspect all livestock at the market being presented for sale. They shall enforce all regulations which apply to the market and animals sold through the market. The individual shall examine the premises and equipment used in handling livestock at the agency to determine sanitation and safety. He/She will be present at the market before, during, and after the sale for a reasonable time in order to complete his/her duties. He/She shall issue certificates of veterinary inspection for animals shipped from the auction, ensuring that the livestock entering interstate commerce are free from visible signs of infectious, contagious diseases. They will provide veterinary services to the consignors and consignees at the market.

They will provide food animal veterinary services to the surrounding communities. The practitioner would perform herd work, such as pregnancy diagnosis, vaccination, fertility testing, and animal processing. They would perform common surgical procedures relevant to the species. They would respond to disease outbreaks and provide guidance in managing effects of such disease incidents. The practitioner will perform necropsies and diagnostic procedures when necessary to establish proper diagnoses. The veterinarian would conduct on farm visits for routine herd health programs or conditions requiring timely attention.

Please describe any past efforts to recruit and retain a veterinarian in the shortage situation identified above (limit your response to 100 words or less).

The veterinary practice servicing the market has employed 5 associate veterinarians over a 3 year period. All five associates resigned their positions with the practice after a short period of employment sighting not wanting to perform the duties and work associated with the auction market as a reason for resignation.

Please describe the risk of this veterinarian position not being secured or retained. Include the risk(s) to the production of a safe and wholesome food supply and to animal, human, and environmental health not only in the community but in the region, state/insular area, nation, and/or international community (limit your response to 250 words or less).

The livestock market in Campbell County is located near the north central border of South Dakota. This auction market sold 129,353 cattle in FY 2011. A large number of these animals originate from Wyoming, Montana and other north western states. The inspecting veterinarian at this market has the responsibility of overseeing the health status of these cattle, safeguarding the livestock industries of South Dakota as well as other receiving states from exposure to economically devastating production diseases. If qualified inspecting veterinarians are not available to perform the duties prescribed by law, Livestock Auction Market Associations and producer groups may challenge the need for veterinary inspection, in favor of keeping the livestock markets open. The presence of an inspecting veterinarian at the auction market aids in animal disease prevention and control. The rules and regulations which govern the markets have been written with the intent of a licensed, accredited veterinarian being present to oversee the health and welfare of animals moved through markets. A veterinarian being part of the auction process is essential in ensuring a safe and healthy food supply, as well as preserving the health of South Dakota livestock.

Please indicate whether you consider this situation/position a candidate for a "service in emergency" agreement (limit your response to 100 words or less). Please see solicitations for additional information regarding the obligation of participants who enter into the "Service in Emergency" agreement.

Not applicable for the 2012 cycle.
